On the aubject of southern California being a health resort I feel incompetent to write I can say nathing from a personal standpoint, having nover known what it was to want good nealds. I know that the number of health seekers is very great and on that account wish to be especially care ful ou this theme, for to use no practice is more contemptible than that of conjuring up illusive pictures hefore the fevered fan cy of an invalid. I have heard of a great many people who claim that they took one foot out of the grave to come here, and who look very little like consumptives now. Of course, they may have exaggerated the r ailments, as many laye to do, but their present state must be genuine -ap every

Not on the Bills East St. Louis turnished a sensation last week that has not been approached since the strike. During the morning hours the railroad depot is crowded with people walting for the various trains. Yesterday an 'Uncla Tom's Cabin" party arrived and immediately began transferring its property to a Jerseyvilla train. Among the actors with the show are two Siberian bloodhounds. Ribert Gray, of Eut St. Louis was an interested spectator, as also was his larga Eoglish mastlff. The latter watched he proceedings intently until the bloodbounds were trotted out of the car. Both were muzzled and the mastiff thought be as a soft thing. With a terrible growl be leaped on one of the bloodhounds and proceeded to est him up. The bloodhound fought hard, but handicapped as he was by the muzzle, he was rapidly being reduce i to pulp. Then one of the show men stip. ped the muzzle off the other bloodhound and be attacked the mastiff. The spectators ran away, and the bloodhounds soon had the manist bleeding in a dozen places. Mr Gray ran forward to save his dog and was hitten in the leg and arm. Two of the negro jubilee eingers then attacked Mr. Gray and he drew a revolver and fired twice without effect. The negroes were arrened and some une in the crowd shot the bloodhounds. The mastiff, or what is left of him, is still alive.

-The many Lancaster friends of Mr Ky., were palmed to reclve the news of the burning of their residence last week. This is the second time they have suffered the loss of their home by fire since removing from Lancaster.

-Lancaster may be said to be enjoying a small boom in the erection of dwelling houses. Several are now in the course of erection and in the apring when the promoneti new streets are opened some twelve or fifteen gentlemen have signified their intentions of hutlding. This is a move in the right direction and this thing of half the residents in town having to hunt a place to remove to the first of every January will be furever averted.

Hints From the Postmaster,

When you call at the office for your mai and the postmaster bands it out, ask him if that le all.

If you ask for your muil, and he tells you there is none, tell bim there ought to be, then go home and send the rest of the family around to ask at different times through the day.

Don't bring your mall to the office natil the mail closes, then curse the postmaster for not opening the mall bag and putting your letter in.

When you want a stamp on your letter tell the posimaster to put it on; if he don't like it lick him. In case you put it on yourself, soak it In your mouth long enough to remove the mncilage; It will then stick

Be sure and ask the postmaster to credit you for stamps; if he has any accommodation table when Mrs. Mary O'Neili left her about him he will do it.

If you have a box stand and grum on it nntil the postmaster bands out your mail; it makes him teel good, especially if he is waiting on somebody else.

William O. Bradley for governor on the republican ticket, we took occasion to refer to his military record in these words: "fle was a gallant colonel in the Federal army and having fought with great heroism through four years of bloody war, he is just the man to catch the soldier vote, and give the hero of Fort Danelson, who smeil ed powder a little himself, a power of fun nominee " We knew that we were stretchit a "joak." D. zens of papers copied the article in good faith and our hero was hestem the current of the greatest boom of adding this hateful comment: "We think our neighbor is somewhat "off" on the war record of Coi. Bradiey. Our understandshedding of any blood in the late "nn his good looks." Our usually well inform ed neighbor is himself more than somewhat blood, for Smith's history of Kentucky, scurity. now hefore us, says he enlisted at the tender age of 14, careful however to omit for ther reference. That justice may be done our friend, who is as pretty as he is bril liant, we are preparing at great cost and inconvenience a true history of his military achievements from the most reliable data obtainable, which we shall publish in due time, and natii then we sak the public to hold ite breath and not express an opinion in the premiees until ail the facts are before them. CLUVERIUS, the young lawyer who se-

Toe prominence of the parties, one being a descendant of President Tyler and the other of Mr Madison, gave the case a wide interest, and it has been the local sensation since the deed was committed in March, 1885 Every effort was made by influential friends to eave the neck of the heartiess young eriminal, but without avail, and he met death, like he had passed through the trying orders of a trial, conviction, sentence and enbeequent imprisonment, with that stoical indifference that has characterized him from the beginning. Not a tremor escaped him and he refused to confess or demy his guilt to the inst. The conviction was entirely on circumstantial evidence. but it was so strong that but little doubt of the poor girl out of the way, and he either murdered her or she committed spicide and the facia are all against the latter theo ry. From first to inst the case has created even more interest than that of James Jaler Phillips who was hung a decade or so ago there tor the muider of his wife, we one con viction was also on circumstantial evidence. ### A Call.

Members of Woman's Christian Temper ance Union, greeting:

DEAR SISTERS. It has seemed good to many of our ladies having the interests of our work at heart, to issue a call for the organisation of a District Convention for the purpose of considering subjects intimately connected with our great work, and of devising ways and means of more succerefully prosecuting the same. Such a convention will be held at Stanford Tues day and Wednesday, the S n and 9 h of February, and it is hoped that not only those who have actively connected themselves with the W C T. U, but also many other women whose hears are in this great work of redeeming humanity and saving the children, will be in attendance. A cor dial invitation is extended to all.

Let us he much in prayer, before that Louisville and it is thought he will not re- time, that wisdom may be given us to plan with descretion, to counsel wisely and that God'e blessing rest on all our efform.

SINGULAR CASE OF A PATHETIC OUTGROWTH OF SENSIBILITY.

Story Told to an Expert In Nervone Affections - A Particularly Mideous Pair of Barn-A Sort of Holy Grall

I heard of a pathetic outgrowth of nervous man who lives at the West End, and who is not only a painfully self-conscious man, but do one given to observing things about him with great minuteness, has become so acutely assceptible to the essential ugliness of the homan ear that he scarcely sees anything else in the people about him than their ears. To a physician, an expert in nervous affections, whom he was wise enough to consuit, this gentleman told his story somewhat after this fashion: "It was as many as five or six years ago that the sight of a particularly hideous ir of ears, one of which had feen slit in a ghastly manner in some accident or light, set me to reflecting on the extraordinary caprice of Providence in setting, in the most conspicnous place upon the head of its curious earthly achievement, such utterly absurd and ansightly con'rivances as human ears. The ear is useful, no doubt; but might not an infinite ingenulty and nu omnipotent choice have provided man with an auditory appilance less fideons than this convoluted axcrescence!

STUDYING IT UP.

"I was led tonsk myself, is there any such thing as a beautiful human earl I looked up all the passages in polite literature in which the human ear is referred to, and found not only that such passages are extremely few, but that the beauty referred to-all the comparisons, of delicate, pink edged feminine to the translucent luteriors of sea shells, and the tike, are simply comparative. No poet ever thought, so far as I could find, of finding absolute beauty in the ear. It is only as a pondent or an accompaniment, less hideous than usual, to the beautiful head and face of a lovely woman, that the actual ear itself, as mart from the faculty of hearing, over becomes tolerable in poetry. In art the ear is a thing to be dissembled; no realist was ever so unblushing as faithfully to paint the car as it is. Photography reveals It ln all ugliness; but poetry bears the same rela. on to art that the dissection of the body does to tho love of humanity.

The running of these through my mind led me to start a sort of Hely Grail quest for a really beautiful human car, and at the same time I found myself searching out, whenever i got upon a street car or a railway train, and as I walked down the crowded streets, all the ugliest ears, with the instinctive eagerness of a connoisseur. The ear habit grew upon me. I became a sort of collector of ears. When I came into a railway train filled with people, my eye ran down the long rows of ears next the able to see whether there was a vacancy in the devious lines that I might fill with my own. That row of ears, to a man who had fallen into tho habit of observing nothing else but the ears, was herribly suggestive of a sea serpeat!

NOTHING BUT EARS, EARS, EARS.

"I say that all this began five or six years ago; but, of course, my mania—for such it has become—did not all at once take this serisus form. It has been a gradual growth. Now I find it threatening, perhaps not my mental balance, for I feel cs able of maintaining that, but my peace of mind certainly, and all my old sensibility to the beauty of the form and the loveliness of life about me. My old keen sense of the bea. iful I ent, as a fallen angel might lament the joys of paradise. For me there is nothing in the world but ears, ears, ears. The pleasure that I sometimes feel in meeting a specimen less hideous than the rest does not repay me for the offense which the uniform dead level of ill-shapen growth inflicts upon me; and I an resolved, if medical science can do anything for so strange a malady, to take the atmost possible advantage of it. If it could so influence my organs of sight as to make it impossible for me ever again to see the human ear at ali, it would be a consummation devoutly to be wished."

I understand that the eminent physician consulted in this case was completely nonpleased for a time, but has at last succeeded an so influencing the sufferer's thoughts and attention by diverting them to other channote that he is aiready somewhat less poignantly conscious of the ears he sees; that the doctor is, in fact, fighting the old mania with a new one, and intends to check the new before it, in its turn, shall take possession of the patient, as did the other. The case, I have so doubt, will suggest to more than one reader something of a similar sort in his knowledge or experience. It is only one of many morbid outgrowths of the keen consciousness, the rawness of sensibility that overwork and lutense mental strain have soperinduced. - Boston Post,

Support of Home Artists. One artist said that the dealers did more in foreign pictures in a day in actual money than the studies with their scores of artists to In a month. There is no more conclusive proof that support is lacking than is found in the fact that young artists just now nro coinpelled to neglect their serious work and do what they can of an ephemeral or businesslike character in order to meet their actual bread and butter bilis. The rent has to be paid, even if customers do not come, dinner has to be hought and tobacco must be had. So if the great picture on the casel cannot be sold for $1,000, why something must be done which will sell immediately for $10. And so these young fellows get into all kinds of pictorial work.

A sculptor in the city here, who has done two or three notable places of work, supported himself and his family during the time he was laboring on what is now a favorite work with the public by drawing tesigns for theatrical posting bills. Tio made no secret about it, and said simply that he could make more money in a shorter time by this work than by any other. He had fone other theatrical work. Iln had gotten up dainty drawings for souvenir bods and illustrations for special programmes, but noao of them was so prolltable as taking n piece of charcoal and with a few sweeping trokes pleture forth the thrilling clinax of a melodramatic play, with the heroine in the arms of the hero and the vill-lu properly and artistically foiled. Book and umgazine illustration is another way in which artists who are skillful draughtsmen parn quick inoney. Some of them have done so well at if that they give now nearly all their time to it and are employed and depended on for this work by the bigger publishers. -Now York Mail and Express.

A Locomotive Fireman's Work. "I don't know of a harder worked man than the locomotive fireman," said an old engineer.

The average man thinks that all the fireman has to do is to ride in the cab and occasionally throw in a stick of wood or a shovelful of coal. THE SONG HE NEVER WROTE,

His thoughts were song, his life was singing; Men's hearts like harps he held and smote, But in his heart went ever ringing, Ringing, the song he never wrote.

Hovering, pausing, luring, fleeting, A farther hine, a brighter mote, The vanished sound of awift winds meeting, The opal ewept beneath the boal; A gleam of wings forever flaming,

Secrets of joy, past name or naming; Measurer of bliss, past dole or rote; Echoes of music, always flying,

Never folded in uest or cote;

Always scho, never the note; Pulses of sife, past life, past dying— All these in the song he never wrote. Dead at last, and the people, weeping.

Turned from his grave with wringing hands—
"What shall we do, now he lies sleeping.

His sweet song silent hi our lands! 'Just as his voice grew clearer, stronger"-This was the thought that keenest amote-O Death; couldst thou not spare him longer? Alas, for the songs he never wrote!"
—Helen Hunt Jackson.

POETS OF ONE POEM.

Wolf, Gray, Woodworth, and Payne Remembered for a Single Poem. An interesting list might be made of single poem poets, and an instructive essay be written on their fives and works. Single Speech Ha Ilton made many speeches, though but one has become fumous. And Charles Wolf wrote more than the "Burial of Sir John Moore," yet by this one poem will he always be remembered. So, too, George Withers' "Shall I Wasting In Despair" is only the best known of a large number of poenis-some of them quite equal to it, from a critical point of view, perhaps superior. Shirley would hardly be remembered by general readers but for his fine pde, "The Glories of Our Blood and State." Thomas, of Cciano, would be forgotten but for "Dies Irw," and those great national hymns, the "Star Spangled Banner," the "Wacht am Rhein," the "Marseiliaise" and "God Save the Queen," may be accounted famous works of single poem poets.

Many people who talk of Ben Jonson would be puzzled to quote a single line except from his "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes;" and, though Walier's name is so well known, he is more often recognized as the writer of the lines on a girdle than on account of anything else. Thomson's "Ruie Britannia" has earned him more famothan his "Seasons" or his epitaph on Newton; and more people know Gray's "Elegy" than have ever even read his "Odes." Samuel Woodworth wrote The Old Oaken Bucket," but who wrote "Ben Bolt" and "The Old Continentals!"

It is but seldon: that one writer is fortunate enough to produce two such well known pleces as Campbell's "Hoheulinden" and "Ye Mariners of England"; while Dibilin, though he wrote so much that once was popular, would be almost forgotton now but for "Tom Bowling." Such a list might be greatly prolonged. Lady Ann Lyndsay's "Auid Robin Gray," William Spencer's "Death of Golert," and Gay's "How Happy Could I be With Either," might all be cited, and many more; but enough has been said to show how little even the best critics can judge of a poet's powers by a single specimen, and how much accident, if it can so be termed, of one happy line or one good melody may have to do with the fame of a writer who would otherwise be unknown. These remarks apply with greater force to song writers than to any other versiforce to song writers than to any other versi-fiers. A good tirst line often makes a song, and still more a good tune, without which, indeed, it would fall comparatively into ob-livion. John Howard Payne only wrote the words, not the melody, of "Home, Sweet Home."—Henry Watterson in Courier-Journal.

Energetic Russell Sage.

If there is a man in New York who is propelled by steam it is Russell Sage. When he steps out of his office apon the street he goes shooting up, down or across Broadway as if driven by an unseen and uneasy power. No one ever saw Mr. Sage quiet unless when asleep, and even there he probably twists and jerks like an eel. At his office he receives a caller with hand mechanically extended, mechanically pumped and worked at a rapid rate, and unless the visitor puts la his time with much celerity it makes Mr. Sage crawl all over with apprehension that a second will be lost. He never sits still in a chair—in truth, he prefers to stand.

There is probably no more miserable man in New York than Mr. Sage on the witness stand. When he had to swear in the elevated rallroad cases he settled into his chair as lf the hand of fate had struck him; he held on to himself as if to keep his soul from flying from his body, and when he was released he grabbed his hat, shot out of the court room and was on his way to his office as If pursued by the Evil One. Mr. Sage takes the clovated up from his office after business hours, walks pell meli from the Forty-second street station into Forty-third street, jungs luto his carriago na i la whileled into the street in a jiffy and off through the park. When he can't keep in motion any other way he twitches his facial muscles and nervously works his hands, - New York Tribune.

FROM THE ASIAN SEA.

PECULIARITIES OF THE MALAYS WHO LIVE IN NEW YORK,

Gregariousness of the Colony in Their Various Relations of Life-Amusement of Turtle Fighting-Gambling-Matrimony-Boarding Honse-Religion.

So far as the western world is concerned the Malay is a sea nomad. Those who have settled in New York came there as seamen, who intended to return by the same ship, but who by accident or other cause were obliged to remain until they were more or less attached to their new home. In the years they have grown by accretion until they form a legitimate colony similar to those of the Chinese, the Itulians and the Polacks. This colony rises and falis in number according to the nationality of foreign seamen in port. It never falls below 300, and sometimes rises as high as 1,500. The Malay, contrary to popular belief, is not a pure blooded race, so far as the New York representatives are concerned. A leading man in the Sixth ward, Nik do la Cruz, has the build of a Falstaff, a round, full face, more like a German's than of any other nationality, a warm sepia complexion, long blue black hair that breaks in heavy curls upon his shoulders, and the physiognomy of an ideal philnnthropist. Min Goe, who is equally popufar in Oriental councils, and who runs a queer ambling house in Mott street, is thin, wiry. thereo featured, straight halred, yellow skinned and cat like in ways and actions. Malaba, a third, is almost European in his physiognomy, but as firrk as a Louisiana negro in hair and skin. These differences are, perhaps, attributable to the fact that most of those in the metropolis come from Manilia and other Maiay seaports, where from time immemorial there has been a constant miscegenation of all the Oriental races.

GREGARIOUSNESS-AMUSEMENTS Like all the eastern people, they are imbituated to the practices made medful by a dense population. No matter where tirey are they crowd together. It is not uncommon for fifteen or twenty to sleep together in a room of 12 by 2) dimensions. In conversation they squat or stand together till almost all engaged are in personal contact. When they visit a liquor saloon or one of the dance ha's so common in the lower wards, they go hi facots of five or more. The gregariousness extends to almost all the relations of life, and In some Malaysian communities enters the markal relation, producing that singular custom, polyandry. Their amusements are few and simple. The most remarkable of these is tartlo fighting. Two snapping turtles are carefully selected and trained. The best for sporting purposes are those that weigh from fifteen to twenty pounds apiece. Lighter once are immature and not so muscular. Heavier ones are logy, slow and less vindictive. Tho training consists in teasing them three times a day with a bamboo rod and allowing them to lrang from this by the hour after they once take hold. The only diet is raw meat and red pepper, even water being tabooed. The day before the fight the teeth and jaws are examined, overhauled, filed and scraped till they resemble knife edges.

The fight is conducted in a small ring not more than a yard in diameter. The anappers are preduced and washed and each tasted by the seconds of the other. This is done to preveut cowitch or poisonous drugs being placed upon the salient points whence it may enter the mouth, nose and eyes of the opposite antagonist. They are then irritated in the usual style with a sharp rod until nearly frenzied, and thea placed la the center of the ring. There is neither wait aur running away Each snaps at the other simultaneously. The best hold is an obligae hold. This enables the one that catches to reach the carutid artery and the windpipe without being compelled to bite through the massive carrillages of the neck. Next to this is a straight neck hold, in which the two jaws strike against the top and bottom of the neck. Below this again is the cross hold, in which the jaws strike against the two sides of the neck. Poorest of ali is the leg hold. This is regarded by all Oriental sports as the acme of unintelligence, because if both the snappers take ing bohis the fight is lengthened out interminably. The combat is to the death-one of the turtles always being killed and frequently botin.

GAMBLIND-MARRIAGE-RELIGION. The Maiays, like the Chinese are great gambiers. Their favorite games for which we have no name in English, suggest (and a few resemble) faro, lottery, roulette, odd and even, dominoes and dice. Many of them have learned the American untional game and draw and binff with the sang froid of a Morrissey or a Ransom. In the home life they have nucle in the new world the Mainys are industrious, affectionate and domestic. When they marry they pick out if possible a German woman, next to her a daughter of Erin, then a lady of color, and just of nil an American. Why they prefer this order has never been ascertained. Nik do in Cruz is married to a German wislow, who speaks but fittle English and he speaks oven fess German. When asked why he married A youngster of the female sex had just her be it "German women are not pretty, but they nover get drunk, they don't light; they work hard; they're good housefreepers, and they have lots of eldblren.' When married they herd together the same as when single A typical boarding house in "Baxter Street Bend" is a compartment on the ground floor, about fourteen feet wide by seventy long broken up by partitions into six rooms. Of these the front room is the office and store. The next, a compartment fourteen by twenly feet, is the fiving and sleeping piaco of the boarders, who vary from one to twenty in number. In the third sleep Nlk, his wife and smaller children, in the fourth his larger children. The tifth is dlining room and kitchen combined. The sixth and last is the store room. Such a pince costs from $35 to $70 a month rent and nets its proprietor about $3,000 per mnum. The Maiays have been taught so many re ligions that they may be trutbfully said to have none. Missionaries and zeulids from the Buddhist, Mohammedan, Roman Cathoile and Confucian falths are found in every town and handet of Malaysia. They outnumber l'rotestant missionaries ten to one. Unlike the latter, they adapt themselves to their surroundings and become integral units of the community. They teach persistently. As a result the Malay faith as seen in New York is a vague mixture of all the religious named .- New York Cor. Cleveland Leader.
